argument for the plaintiff. On the point of the release given by Mr. Clift the attorney claimed that Mr. Clift, through afe and through worry over he case after the accident, had not been in a competent state of mind to make such an agreement. The attor-ney claimed that the trolley car was running at a rate of speed over six miles an hour and that the evidence showed no gong was sounded before the actident. He argued that the mo-torman was in a hurry to complete his trip to the carbarn and was not looking out ahead as he ought to have been doing. The attorney argued that the court ought to undo what he claimed was the wrong that had been done Mr. Clift, who had estimated his loss of time and his medical expenses through the accident at about $600. ourt adjourned at 4,30 until 10

Papers in several new cases were February 7, 1912, to ten months in jail filed on Monday with Clark Parsons for the crime of adultery. The plaintiff asks the custody of four minor of the superior court.

The city of Norwich is made defendant in a suit for $10,000 damages, the statutory amount, for the death of Maurice Spottswood in New Lon-don on the night of November 15, 1911. from an electric shock while he was about to use the trolley line's tele-phone in his duties as assistant start-er for the Connecticut company.

His widow, Margaret Spottswood, executrix of his estate, brings the suit, in which it is alleged that the current which killed her husband came from the Norwich city electric light station, crossing on to the telephone wires from the electric light station wires through contact between the two sets of wires near Shipping street in this city. It is alleged that the city falled to properly protect the bare uninsulatwires of the trolley telephone from the high potential wires of the electric light station, that the placing of the wires was such that they could sag ogether and that there was negligence about regular and proper inspection.

Mrs. Spottswood has a suit against the Connecticut company for a similar amount, which is assigned for the present term of court. Colchester Divorce Suit.
